Flower Arrangements

Do you ever envy your neighbor for her ability to arrange flowers attractively?

Miss Ruth Jamison, home furnishings specialist at V. P. I., says a few simple rules will help you to compete with the most artistic.

Make the arrangement 1½ times as high as an upright container, or 1½ times the average diameter of the low container.

Avoid crowding. Place each flower in separately and carefully.

Use tall containers for tall, heavy flowers. Keep the container and the flowers in scale.

Arrange flowers in a natural manner. Try to make them look as though they had grown in the container.

Do not have stems extending far beyond the others in the arrangement.

Do not have flowers at the same height, in the same place, and the same distance apart. Avoid regular spacing.

Do not let the stems cross above the tops of the container or in line of vision.

One color should predominate in a mixed color arrangement. Do not have equal amounts of the various colors used. Usually, two or three colors will be more effective and more easily arranged than several colors.

Do not use artificial flowers. There is always some living material which is more attractive which can be used.

Keep the darkest and the largest flowers low in the arrangement.

Use flowers with their own foliage when possible. If you use foliage of other plants, be ure it is of similar texture, color and shape of that of the flower being used. Never pad an arrangement with fern, although some arrangements are good with some fern carefully used.

Use all stages of the flower development when it is possible to do so. A few buds and half-opened blooms carefully inserted with the opened blossoms will add interest and variety to the arrangement and make it appear more natural.

Use fresh material. Remove any blossoms or foliage which wilt easily. Replace such material with fresh flowers and foliage, or rearrange the remaining material so that nothing is noticeably missing from the design.

Select key points or locate main stems and flowers (usually three units located on a triangular basis will be enough) and fill in to make mass arrangement.

Do not use several types of arrangement in one room.

Try to have the arrangement on a piece of furniture which is in scale with its size. For instance, do not put a large vase on a small coffee table.

A garden hose will have longer life if drained thoroughly and rolled into large, loose coils after each use.

Secretary of State Dulles said "a pretty thorough airing" of foreign policy argument during the campaign would be welcome.

New Fishing Pier Heads Many Improvements at Ocean View

Ocean View — A new fishing pier, refurbished accommodations and lots of activity will greet the 1956 summer visitor of this seaside resort at Norfolk.

Ocean View, one of the few beaches located within the boundaries of a large city, is ideally suited for the family of moderate means. It also is designed to meet the recreational needs of the entire family.

A survey by the Virginia State and Norfolk Chambers of Commerce showed that a new fishing pier is being built at the amusement park at the beach, which has been open since April 1. The bathhouse, opened May 5. The new pier, of course, is designed for fishing and will raise to two the number of piers for that purpose. The new one is expected to be larger than the old one.

The survey showed that the Sea Isle Motel has carried on an extensive rebuilding program and that the Nansemond Hotel, as well as a number of other hotels and motels along the beach, has carried out some refurbishing.

Several new rides have been added at the $2,000,000 Ocean View amusement park, where repair work has been extensive following last year's hurricanes.

As is customary, Ocean View's activities are many and varied. Fireworks displays are frequent. Beauty and other contests are scheduled throughout the summer. Circus acts will perform as usual.

Ocean View, which celebrated its 100th anniversary in 1954, boasts about five miles of wide beach which slopes gently into the relatively calm waters of the Chesapeake Bay. The smooth waters add to the safety of the excellent swimming there, making it possible for children to bathe with little or no danger. There is practically no undertow, and life guards are on duty during all hours of activity.

In addition to the swimming, the resort offers a large picnic pavilion which has become a popular gathering place for group or family picnics. The pavilion is sheltered in case of rain.

Fishing, too, is another activity about which the resort boasts. Row boats, motor and charter trips are available at the resort, as is fishing equipment which can be rented at reasonable cost. A boat can be rented for as little as $2 per day.

Accomodation rates vary at the resort as they do everywhere else. However, there is a movement toward housekeeping apartments and small cottages rather than the hotel rooms. A good quantity of both is available, however.

The average weekly rate for a housekeeping apartment, for a family of four, is about $50 with everything furnished except the food. Hotel and cottage rooms average about $20 a week per person.

United States air bases in Morocco, built at a cost of $410,000,000 are said to be threatened as a result of documents exchanged between France and Morocco.

PROPOSED FUNDS FOR PARK DEVELOPMENT

Appomattox Court House National Historical Park, Virginia, scene of the surrender of General Robert E. Lee to General Ulysses S. Grant, is scheduled for development and restoration costing approximately $372,000 under proposals in the National Park Service MISSION 66 program, Secretary of the Interior Fred A. Seaton announced Sunday.

The announcement revealed that $66,000 has been earmarked for roads and trails, and $306,000 for buildings and utilities, with completion of all projects expected by 1965, the 100th anniversary of the surrender.

National Park Service Director Conrad L. Wirth pointed out that the above totals do not reflect expenditures for increases to park staff for management and protection of the area, and maintenance and rehabilitation of existing facilities.

Wirth declared that the program at Appomattox Court House will be initiated in 1957 when approximately $48,500 will be spent in the partial restoration of the Clover Hill Tavern guest house, and the Plunkett-Meeks store and house.

MISSION 66, the Park Director explained, is the 10-year national park program scheduled for completion in 1966 when the National Park Service observes the golden anniversary of its establishment. He asserted that the program has the firm endorsement of President Eisenhower, and funds to get it started are provided in the Department of the Interior 1957 appropriation act which is awaiting the President's signature.

Director Wirth emphasized that a firm time schedule for all projects in the National Park System has not been developed. "Some of them," he said, "must be deferred in the early years of the program, while the most critical problems within the entire park system are met. "However," he added, "a special effort will be made to complete all the projects at Appomattox for the area's 10th anniversary celebration.

The Park Director reported that among the projects proposed in MISSION 66 for Appomattox Court House National Historical Park are:

Partial restogation of the Village of Appomattox Court House, including completion of the tavern restoration, and similar work on other buildings.

Restoration of the Richmond, Lynchburg State Road to its location and alignment from the Appomattox River through the village to the Confederate Cemetery; construction of a new entrance parking area south of the Surrender House.

Restoration of fences and other grounds to Civil War appearance, and archeological investigation of the village area to obtain material of historic significance.

Expansion of utilities to meet requirements of added facilities, increases to the park staff for interpretation, protection, and maintenance needs.

ATTRACTIONS AT COLONIAL BEACH

Richmond,- Colonial Beach, known as the "Playground of the Potomac" for its split personality is looking forward to a record-breaking season this summer.

From early indications, the popularity of this thriving resort of fun machines and mixed drinks, just beside the arm of the Virginia shore appears to be heading for a new high.

With the onset of warm weather, crowds at the establishments on the piers extending into Monroe Bay waters already have been reported as far larger than usual.

Popular, because it is within easy driving distance of Richmond and Washington, the resort has also made even closer in elapsed driving time with the opening of an interstate strip that some residents hope will serve as an impetus for a regular service air carrier to begin daily trips from other Virginia cities.

Other improvements have been made throughout the community in anticipation of the expected popularity of the resort, according to the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

One seawall, built by the State Department of Highways, during 1955 has proved helpful, but numerous residents hope to extend this wall in order to provide more protection for the beach area proper.

FIRE ENGINES BURN

Santa Maria, Calif.. Three of this town's four fire engines burned at the fire station recently, and two of the regular firefighters, including the chief were away at a firemen's convention. The station's siren, summons volunteer firemen, broken down two days before. In the time fire units from nearby Lompoc got things under control, damage to the station and equipment was estimated to be around $2,000.

Health and Beauty

Nothing gives a child more happiness than to be allowed to own a pet. However, the child that has a pet should be required to care for it as far as possible.

The very helplessness of their dumb playmates will appeal to the better nature of children. Caring for pets teaches the child thoughtfulness, patience and tenderness.

Inquiry was made some time ago among a group of youthful criminals, and it was discovered that only a very few of them had ever owned a pet in childhood.

A lady told me recently that a little boy stopped at her door, and asked for food. She told him to sit on the steps while he ate. He declined, saying that he would take something in his hand.

She watched him to see if he would throw the food away. but he crossed the street where his dog was obediently waiting for him. He divided the food exactly in half, ate one-half himself and gave his dog the other half.

It is safe to assume that this boy will not be found later in life among a gang of criminals and law-breakers. He knows the law of kindness as was exemplified in his consideration for his dog.

Yes, let your children have pets, but see to it that they are treated with kindness. The children will learn that dumb creatures need love, that they appreciate and respond to it. They will also learn that, as they hunger and thirst, so does Rover or Tabby.

The devotion of their animal friends will help them to realize that as we give love we get it back. A selfish child will grow up into a selfish adult. The child will learn unselfishness from caring for his pets.

When the child has a pet, even though he doesn't feel like doing it, he must be made to understand that its wants must be attended to. He will in this way perceive a little of the sacrifices that others make for him.

It helps a child to realize that his parents are always toiling, sacrificing and planning for the comfort and welfare, so he in turn must care for his pets, who cannot care for themselves.

How To Reduce Safely

Food is the fuel of the body. Your automobile requires no oil or gas when it is resting, but your body does. When lying at perfect rest sleeping soundly, the body is using fuel which was taken in as food. It uses much more when it is rising.

The foods that store fat in the body are mostly the starches, such as bread, cereals, rice, hominy, potatoes, pastry, cakes, pies, and most of all kinds, cream, butter and fats. meats. "Then," queries the overweight friend, "must I eat all those things out of my diet in order to lose weight?"

By no means. That has been found to the detriment of the health of the victims. Of course, in the making foods should be purchased more sparingly. Many fat people eat too much starch. In fact, they eat too much of everything.

In order to reduce without suffering hunger, weakness, or discomfort, the person should never try to reduce too rapidly.

The vegetables such as cabbage, turnips, kale and greens of all kinds, contain valuable minerals and are laxative. They can be eaten freely, for they do not produce fat. Half a head of lettuce or a banner is quite filling. A combination of raw fruits and vegetables is extremely wholesome and satisfying. Lemon juice is preferable to some as a dressing.

Liquids are held by the body in the fatty tissues and will generally aids in this retention. For this reason, it is well to reduce the amount of salt and water. No matter how much you exercise, you will not reduce weight if you continue to overeat.

It is extremely important that overweight people eat more moderately and down down considerably on starches. Most obese people crave fattening foods of all kinds, such as breads, cereals, and potatoes. Too many starchy foods, or too much are served at meals.

Meat, bread, or potatoes, and one or two fresh vegetables, a fresh raw salad, and if desired, a light dessert, is quite enough for a meal. In fact, one could get along very well on less, especially if trying to reduce.

If there is a feeling of hunger in the middle of the morning or afternoon, try eating some fruit. This often proves very satisfying. A glass of tomato, orange or grapefruit juice is strengthening and filling.

If you want to eat rich foods, disfiguring protuision of any kind is such a source of annoyance to you, you may do so safely and comfortably by eating sparingly.

Archeologists Make Finds at Old C. H.

Valuable information for use in the restoration to 1865 appearance of the Tavern and Guest House at Old Appomattox Court House, was uncovered by archeologists here yesterday. J. C. Harrington, regional chief of interpretation for the National Park Service and a recognized archeologist, will continue through Friday of this week, exploratory diggings at the Tavern.

The findings yesterday were the landing site for the outside staircase at the Tavern and the large stone that supported the front porch at the Tavern.. There was no interior staircase at the Tavern Guest House.

These exploratory efforts are all preliminary to actual restoration of three important buildings at the Old Court House. These are the Tavern Kitchen and Guest House, the Guest House, and the Plunkett-Meeks Store.

A sum of $48,500 will be available during the fiscal year beginning July 1, for these three buildings. Other archeological work will locate the walks, type of floors in the original buildings, etc.

An archeological survey team is now at work at the Old Court House and will be here all summer. This team is headed by Robert L. Raley, of a special survey course at the University of Pennsylvania, who is supervisor. He is being assisted by two others: William E. Pelham, a third year student in the School of Architecture at the University of Pennsylvania, and Jerome D. Sager, a senior at the School of Design and Architecture at the University of Illinois.

This team will make measurements of the above three buildings, and will make drawings from which the working plans will be drawn. They are already at work on these measurements, and may have some plans ready for actual work to begin by August.

The National Park Service makes archeological work a step in restoring historic buildings, so as to have the completed projects completely accurate. As the restoration proceedes at Old Appomattox Court House the activity of these teams will continue in importance.

Appomattox County should feel proud in having ranked fourth in tobacco last season on the planting basis. A total of 1,455,500 tree settings were planted in this county. This was about three times the acreage assigned to the county. Only Southampton and Buckingham, Southampton and Buckingham topped Appomattox.

Mr. Conner has been the center of interest this week in Appomattox as he has been driving around town in a very spry 1922 Model T Ford. Sam has had the aged car for many years, and keeps it in running order, and when the mood strikes him he lazes out in it for a spin. They say he has many offers to sell the 22 model, but we hardly think he cares to get rid of it!

We never saw so many pennies: Once each year, Dr. Harold Spencer, local druggist, unlocks the coin container on the weight scales at the drug store. The great event took place on Saturday morning of this week, and we never saw so many pennies! And what fun! there were several dimes and nickels. Maybe someone was elated after weighing, and dropped in a few for the scales!

Just came across a postal I had received some time back from Chicago, which said that the sender had gone to the top of the famous Tribune Tower, and that on the top floor they have a display of relics from all parts of the nation. And on display were: 3 bricks from Old Appomattox Court House. We presume that the bricks were from the McLean home, rather than the old Court House, however, it does bring to mind that the old court house burned in 1892, and we wonder if anyone saved any of the original brick?

In closing writing the above, I find that some of the original of the old court house are in the porch of the clerk's office at the new court house, and probably some in the court house itself. Anyone have any extras?

Back in July 4— There were 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence. 26 were lawyers, 8 were merchants, 6 were physicians, 2 were soldiers, 2 statesmen, one was a printer, one a minister, one was a shoemaker and one was a surveyor. The oldest signer was Benjamin Franklin, at 70, the youngest was Edward Rutledge, a lawyer. The last survivor of the signers was Charles Carroll, who lived until November 14, 1832, aged 95. As another Fourth approaches, we could wish more birth of interest in the freedoms of our country, as set forth in the Declaration.

How many Presidents of the U. S. have you seen in person? I have seen three, and got to shake hands with two of the three. First was President Howard Taft. That takes quite a spell, but when I shook hands with Mr. Taft, he was no longer President but Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Gee, he was a big man, weighing over 300 pounds, and what an imposing figure in the flowing robes of chief justice!
